1) Nature challenges humans in many ways, through disease, weather, and famine. For those living along the coast, one unusual phenomenon capable of catastrophic destruction is the tsunami (pronounce "tsoo-NAH-me". A tsunami is a series of waves generated in a body of water by an impulsive disturbance. Earthquake, landslides, volcanic eruptions, explosions, and even of meteorites can generate tsunami. Starting at sea, a tsunami slowly approaches land, growing in height and losing energy through bottom friction and turbulence. Still, just like any other water waves, tsunami unleashes tremendous energy as they plunge onto the shore. They have great erosion potential, stripping beaches of sand, undermining trees, and flooding hundreds of meters inland. They can easily crush cars, homes, vegetation, and anything they collide with. To minimize the devastation of tsunami, scientists are constantly trying to anticipate them more accurately and more quickly. Because many factors come together to produce a life-threatening tsunami, foreseeing them is not easy. Despite this, researchers in meteorology preserve in studying and producing tsunami behavior. Which sentence best expresses the essential information of the passage:

- 1) - Tsunami could become new source of usable energy in the next hundreds years.
- 2) - Tsunami do more damage to the land than flooding
- 3) + Tsunami can have an especially catastrophic impact on coastal communities
- 4) - Scientists can predict and track tsunami with a fair degree of accuracy, reducing the potential impact.
